while this is sound advice, remember that time management may not be at the root of the problem, and that taking stimulants without a prescription or medical supervision is extremely dangerous